2017 DNP Students Honored

Linda Paradiso

2017 Doctor of Nursing Practice graduate, Linda Paradiso, was selected as a Rising Star of Scholarship and Research and will be presenting her capstone project titled, "The Relationship Between Just Culture, Trust and Patient Safety," at the upcoming Sigma Theta Tau International Biennial Convention. Her work was also accepted for presentation at the International Conference on Health and Hospital Management, to be held in Vienna, Austria, November 6-7, 2017.

Kathleen Rea

Kathleen Rea, also a 2017 DNP graduate, received the Virginia Nurses Foundation 2016 award for Direct Patient Care Leader & Patient Safety. The award was based on her work leading organizational patient safety work as well as system changes to eliminate catheter-associated urinary tract infections.

Faculty Attend Research Congress in Dublin

Six faculty members traveled to Ireland in July to attend Sigma Theta Tau International's 28th International Nursing Research Congress in Dublin. The team presented a symposium titled "Innovative Evidence-Based Strategies for BSN Education" that was enthusiastically received by a standing room only audience. Topics and presenters included the following:

- Evidence-Based Educational Strategies That Promote Handoff Effectiveness: Connecting the Dots between Senders and Receivers
Christine A. Sump and Donna L. Rose
- Using Service Learning to Enhance Cognitive Development of Nursing Research for Complex Social Issues
Linda K. Bennington
- The Use of Condition Mapping to Teach Situational Awareness
Amy M. Wagner
- Innovative Pedagogical Approaches to Undergraduate Nursing Research: Avoiding the Cursory Critique
Jamela M. Martin
- Using Evidenced-Based Educational Practices to Improve Graduation Rates for RN-BSN Students from Disadvantaged Backgrounds
Janice E. Hawkins
